

Making a poem

I caught the ideas

That floated out of my mind

I poured them into a glass of water

I spread the words out

And broke lines with my fingers

I dissolved the unneeded words

Dumped the rest on paper

And then

I called it a poem

Dorothy Levine